Overview

There are misconceptions concerning using candles, incense, charms, etc for spells, and that the items hold the power of the spell itself. The truth is that you are the source of the energy being projected and the driving force. For example: A candle becomes the focal point to help you direct your energy.

A variety of paths use an assortment of items to help them achieve goals and to act as trigger items in order to assist in focused energy.

It is our hope that you take this information and build your own distinct method as you explore your own individual path.

Getting Started

Know your purpose

Projected energy starts from the time you begin thinking of the options of how to carry out your work, it becomes better to get the supplies after you have time to sit back and think about what you plan to accomplish and what could possibly be the variables surrounding the outcome. It is important to think about your goal in a specific way.

“Action Follows Thought.”

Focus on who you are

You are an individual set on your own individual path(s) and it is important to always keep this in mind when looking for supplies. There are many “Common options” but to get something that is “one size fits all” doesn’t always work as hoped.

Be sure to ask questions and be cognitive to items that make you feel comfortable and empowers you as an individual, but be openminded enough to explore new possibilities.

You will often hear the phrase, “... This works for me.”. That person is not you, but has similar circumstances.

Just because you both may be hungry, doesn’t mean you will both eat the same thing. It is okay to mix/match recipes though to make the meal taste better.

It is important to understand that some of these methods have been around for centuries and are being altered as times have changed, and to accommodate for individual purpose.

Our Goal

- Not only explore theories, but to test them.
- Build on centuries of research to develop into modern times.
- Continue to Nourish an open communication system of learning without prejudices and fear holding us back

Woods

Acacia

various locations worldwide

Masc/Fem- Water

Very balanced, but in a different way compared to Ebony, which is more of a mixture of elements. Acacia has a very fine line between its sides, specifically masculine and feminine traits. Very similar to Teak with its personality traits. Overall, very flowing with its intentions. A resilient energy that can work well with a variety of workings. Structurally, Acacia will vary in hardness due to the varieties under the umbrella of Acacia. Therefore, careful inspection of the blank is necessary to determine what type of design that particular piece can sustain.

African Blackwood

West, Central and South Africa

Masculine- Spirit

Blackwood's energy, in short, does not live in the realm of the living. Highly associated with the afterlife, communication with the afterlife and endings/changes in cycles. Any work involving summoning or Spirits is recommended. Blackwood also is known to block energies at times. Occasionally, Blackwood will learn what energies its companion would like to block, making it useful in protection. It is one of a few woods that are considered true conduit woods- woods that would allow one to have direct connections to the spiritual realm. As such, Blackwood requires a regular cleansing. On my graph of elemental associations, Blackwood should not even be listed. As it lives in the Spirit Realm, its energy will latch on to an element, either of its holder or what force its strongest in proximity. Oddly, perhaps its own way of anchoring itself here. Blackwood will work with a smaller amount of people than most. Depending greatly on a practitioner's own background and energy. Some will form incredible bonds with the wood. Some will be immediately put off by an uneasy feeling when attempting to use Blackwood. A very popular wood for its dark black exterior, those that are typically drawn to its visual, from my experience, do not work well with African Blackwood. A truly unique wood that will bond in mysterious ways, it is undoubtedly one of the most powerful and misunderstood in Wandmaking.

Amboyna Burl

Southeast Asia

Masculine- Fire, Air

Powerful and energetic. One must be able to control energies well with Amboyna. Due to strength of the wood, designs are normally quite simple and shorter wands are produced. Which works well due to the potent energy signature to begin with.

Apple

worldwide

Feminine- Earth, Spirit, Water

A grounded but bountiful and abundant energy. Some feel a strong spiritual connection with Apple. Apple woods have primarily feminine attributes to them and possess a long-standing history in folklore and mythology that associates Apples in general to Goddesses. Apple wood is a fantastic choice for anyone seeking a wood for healing rituals, spiritual or physical. Apple wood will bond with its user and help to form stronger relationships, therefore working well with any bonding magic. A nice wood overall to work with both magically and in the workshop, I hesitate at times using it for longer wands due to its softer characteristic.

Ash

North America, Europe, parts of Asia

Feminine- Air, Spirit

Helps with various types of healing work. Very intuitive and protective. A strong wood for energy work.

Aspen

North America and Europe

Feminine- Water, Spirit, Air

Very good for protection and cleansing. Aspen has been known to be quite pure with its energy. As such, it shares some truth seeking behaviours with other woods of purity. Can be a very "moving forward" wood.

Beech

Feminine- Air, Fire

Useful for binding work, friendship. A good wood for physical healing rituals. Also, a nice choice for beginners who seek a wood with a slightly deeper energy. It has been known to associate itself with older energy and if it chooses so, Beech can be a wise and knowledge finding wood.

Birch

Masculine- Fire

Very purifying and cleansing. Less chaotic than Padauk, it does have grounding properties to it. Good for renewal and cleansing rituals.

Black Poisonwood

Masculine- Spirit, Fire

Promotes introspection and knowledge. Allows one to see through much internal stimuli for a clearer path. Highly spiritual.

Bloodwood

Tropical South America

Masculine/Feminine- All physical elements

Aligned with the physical elements (Earth Air Water Fire) and is known to amplify its holders elemental traits (Zodiac, etc). Well balanced in masculine and feminine traits. Useful for a wide variety of work.

Black Limba

Western regions of Africa

Masculine- Earth, Fire, Spirit

Few woods are able to journey back and forth in magic from positive light energy to a more darker nature. Normally positive if wanted, it can defend against negative, dark energy if needed to. However, powerful in its own right. It can also help its holder to become finely in tune with their darker side. Known for powerful Hex work. Highly intuitive. Good for scrying.

Bocote

Mexico, into central and south America

Masculine- Fire, Spirit--

Fiery, passionate and highly spiritual. Bocote can help to substitute African Blackwood with some traits (working with cycles). It also provides its holder clarity at times that helps with inspiration. Its a very focused wood that has almost limitless potential to take energy and finely focus it into a forward motion. Therefore, Bocote can be a powerful ally when motivation and a passionate path is needed.

Bubinga

Africa

Feminine- Earth, Fire

Highly intuitive. Very positive and very useful during full moons. Its intuitive and instinctive nature can be well trusted as majority of its energy is clear and not hidden and reveals itself to its true owner well.

Butternut

Masculine/Feminine Earth, Fire

Brings good fortune, truths. Works well for a wide variety of energy work.

Cedar

Cedar -Aromatic- Feminine- Earth, Spirit-- (pictured)- Excellent for divination.

-Alaskan Yellow Cedar- Feminine- Fire, Earth--
Excellent for purification.

-Spanish Cedar- Masculine- Fire, Earth--Very similar to mahogany.

Cocobolo

Central America

Masculine- Fire

Energetic, good for defensive work, fiery... but interestingly works very well with lunar work too. Has a tendency to have energy spikes during full moons. Very protective, sometimes fiercely so. A loyal wood.

California Redwood

Western North America

Masculine/Feminine- Spirit, Fire

Well known for physical healing energies. It also lends endurance traits to its holder, providing well balanced, grounded energy. Cannot tolerate longer, thinner designs.

Canarywood

Masc/Fem- Spirit, Air

Enhances creativity, inspiration and artistry. Excellent for scrying as well.

Cherry

Masc/Fem- Earth

Well balanced. Promoting clarity and decision making. Its energy can also be very present and abundant. Cherry enjoys being in the here and now. One of a handful of woods that I personally recommend for beginners and experienced users alike. Older Cherry woods will function very much like Oak, however possess an almost playful like energy.

Chestnut

Feminine- Earth, Water, Spirit

Helps to eradicate unwanted energies from your surroundings, like home, etc. Chestnut also does well with physical healing, but more cleansing

Cypress

Feminine-Water, Spirit

Generally, a soothing energy. Calming and positive.

Ebony

Masc/Fem- all five elements

Ebony is a fine choice for anyone for a variety of reasons- mainly due to the fact that it is only one of a handful of woods in the world that are finely balanced between what people would consider Feminine / Masculine traits. As well, it is uniquely balanced between all five elements, calling to any of them with ease and also forming a bond with its holder regardless of energy they present. Due to this, it has been historically considered one of the most prized and finest woods for Wand making, even though it might not be the absolute strongest energies on the list. It also does not matter the species of Ebony as they all would exhibit this signature. In addition, I know of many who might not prefer Ebony because of the balanced nature of it as one might want a pull in a certain direction. Well suited for a variety of different workings.

Elm

Masc/Fem- Fire, Earth

Like Black Limba, Elm has a positive protective side or a darker, destructive side. It is also highly associated with cycles, beginnings and endings.

Elder

Masculine- Water, Earth

A curious wood at times, Elder can both protect from negative energies or make its holder find themselves having a conversation with those negative energies. Mainly though, the repelling of negative wins the day. Elder also promotes intelligence and understanding current situation. Works well with Raven cores

Goncalo Alves

Parts of Mexico and Brazil

Masculine- Air, Spirit, Fire

Goncalo Alves, also known as Tigerwood, is a hard wood from the Mexico region moving into South America. A hardier, dense wood, it excels at Wandsmithing due to its strength. Goncalo is well used for divination purposes, and has a free flowing, positive energy. It does carry some protective qualities as well as purifying, however overall, Goncalo Alves is not a harsh wood to use. It's secondary name used from time to time, Tigerwood, occasionally hints at some of its nature.... being a wood that is not overly extroverted or rushed. Goncalo will be happy being patient and focused however once sprung into action, its energy is surprisingly unrestrained quality about it. Ideal for Master Class wands, unexpectedly useful in an Apprentice Class role...

Hickory

North America

Maculine- Fire, Earth, Spirit

Very similar to Oak, however, fierier and more confident. Hickory will have more of an outgoing or extroverted energy which will provide more of a confident flow outwards to those who might feel they are more introverted.

Holly

More common from North America. Some varieties and species from Europe, Africa and Asia

Masculine/Feminine- Earth

A great wood for animal work, connections with animals. Also, protection and healing. A very pure wood as well, it works well for cleansing work.

Ipe

central and south America

Masculine- Earth, Water

A wood of renewal. Useful for any ritual work involving personal growth or moving forward

Iroko

tropical Africa

Air- Balanced Masc/Fem

A tree that has numerous folk tales that are both ancient and new. Iroko originates from tropical African regions. It is a harder wood that can live into the area of 500 years old. It is sometimes known as African Teak.

A common theme in many of the tales of this wood is just how supernatural its energy can be. Some contacts have placed it easily into the realm of African Blackwood, which is definitely saying something. Iroko is mainly associated with the element of Air but has a very strong secondary association with Water.

The wood has a very strong, fierce, protective nature about it. It shares many of the attributes that African Blackwood carries (such as its strong connection to spirit realm energy and communication) BUT its energy is very deeply rooted in the realm of here and now, which is one of its oddest features because once you form a bond with this wood, the feeling of Iroko is timeless, time shifting and ancient

Jatoba

Central/South America. Can be found in the West Indies as well.

Masculine- Air/Water

A hard wood in overall strength. It has a surprising energy strength as well, occasionally flying under the radar. Not a grounded wood, Jatoba will excel at many types of healing.

It also has a purifying quality that, when channeled, can feel harsh. Best when used in a defensive method.

Kingwood

Mexico through Brazil

Masculine/Feminine- Spirit-

A highly protective wood, Kingwood excels in blocking energies with a very potent energy. It is also highly Spiritual and intuitive. Like Padauk, it best suits an experienced user and like Amoyna Burl, a smaller Wand will do nicely.

Lacewood

genuine- south america. often confused with other species such as Leopard wood and species from Australia

Masc/Fem- Water--

A nicely flowing energy. Lacewood is full of positive and luck. Lacewood is a moving wood with doesn't typically like to sit still. A wood that is very superstitious on its own, Lacewood works well with a "what if" personality. Enhances communication and will form a strong bond with its holder over time and experience.

Lignum Vitae

central and regions of south America

Masculine- Earth, Water

A very, natural magical wood. Incredibly strong. Very positive. Works very well with Solar cycles and energies although it is more associated with the Earth element

Makore

Africa

Masc/Fem- Fire, Spirit

A fine wood to work with. However. Read the description above for Black Limba. Makore has the same properties and is known as the next level up in comparison to energies. More potent than Black Limba, Makore will immediately leave an impression on its holder- either they will be able to work with the wood, learning from what it can reveal, or be completely repelled by its unique signature.

Maple

various locations worldwide

Feminine- Spirit

Surprisingly spiritual in nature, there are many types of Maple and all share similar qualities. Its energy can at times be erratic but never strays too far from centre, still making it useful for beginners.

Marblewood

Northeastern, East South America

Masculine- Earth, Spirit, Water

A very well-grounded wood and renowned for its healing properties. A goal-oriented wood as well when using it with a direction in mind.

Mahogany

various locations worldwide

Masculine- Earth, Fire

Well suited for majority of work, Mahogany does excel above most for fertility and new beginning rituals. Although Santos Mahogany is better at it, all types of Mahogany are useful for fertility rituals and energy work. Also beneficial in creating stronger bonds.

Myrtle

Oregon into California

Masc/Fem- Earth, Spirit, Fire

A very balanced wood. It allows its holder to step back and it promotes deeper thought and analysis of a situation that may actually appear very unclear. It will work well for a wide variety of uses.

Nogal (Peruvian Walnut)

Mexico into South America

Masc/Fem- Water/ Earth/ Spirit

Nogal or Peruvian Walnut is a fine example of a branch away from the standard Walnut family tree. Unlike the majority of Walnuts, which have a fine equal balance of Earth and Water type energy, Nogal is more on the flowing Water side. A more energetic member of the Walnut family, Nogal notably has a higher third association with the element of Spirit. A great wood for divination, it is a highly intuitive wood that will carry a higher energy rating overall compared to a Black or English Walnut that I would most often use. It is also a more protective wood used many times for defensive work. Nogal will fit in with many tasks- Protection, divination, healing. Nogal can be considered a fantastic choice for an "all around" wood. Due to its energy profile, many who might be more experienced with energy work will feel most comfortable with the flowing energy of Nogal, however... it is a forgiving and gentle wood at times, willing to grow into a role. Therefore, Nogal can also be a great companion of those just starting out.

Narra

Southeast Asia

Feminine- Fire

A Feminine version of Padauk wood- powerful, shifting energy, chaotic at times. One needs to be grounded or able to work parallel with woods like these.

Osage Orange

South, Central USA

Masculine- Spirit, Fire

Like Shedua, it is useful for occlumency and legilimency. It has a talent for repelling energies and can create a bond with the mind well.

Oak

Worldwide

Masculine- Earth, Spirit

A very grounded and spiritual wood. Highly protective and resourceful. Even though it leans towards more masculine traits, the main varieties of Oak are well balanced. Able to focus and balance an individual well and is known as a safe wood for beginners.

Oak, for all intents and purposes has been a universal favourite in Wandmaking. Regardless of the species. I enjoy using Oak for the Apprentice Class Wands and the occasional Master Class thrown into the workshop schedule. Although I don't focus on the fact much, Oak can excel at a variety of tasks.

In past conversations with colleagues in my circles, Oak can group well into what we in the profession call "Seer" woods. Oak is very much stealth when speaking of this grouping as generally it's known for its stability, calm, grounding nature. And for the vast majority of the time that's exactly how I advertise and explain it as it is Oaks primary personality. However, for those that know Oak well, it possesses another side to it.

Oak has a hidden talent for divination and scrying in wandmaking. You might not notice this energy immediately as Oak is comfortable with taking its time and being patient itself. It's talent for this catches almost everyone off guard. However, you don't need to travel far to hear very spiritual tales about this great tree. Stories and beliefs associated with Oak can be found everywhere from Christianity, Norse culture, Celtic and Greek mythologies .... numerous locations and backgrounds that I could never fit into one post.

So take into consideration Oaks hidden talents as we travel closer to the years end, meeting up with another Realm.

I carry a special stock of double century old Oak and recently had received what I believe to be Holm Oak (might also be Turkish Oak). Reclaimed Oak for Wands, unlike its milled and "freshly made" counterparts, possess an amazing refined and wise nature about them. They have lived and seen in different ways compared to newly cut Oak. Their ability to unlock and work with Oaks more unknown energies is more common and impressive.

Olivewood

Europe and regions of Africa

Masc/Fem- Air

Overall, a nicely balanced wood. Strong, peaceful.

Padauk

Africa

Masculine-Fire

Padauk is known for its dynamic, ever changing energy. It can be chaotic at times; therefore, it is not normally recommended for those starting in the Craft. However, if one was able to pair well with Padauk, its energy is extremely powerful....and in some circles, is considered the strongest energy wood to use for Wandmaking. Can be useful for healing, energy, ambition, success, divination.

Pecan

North America

Feminine- Earth, Secondary Water

Like many fruit bearing trees, nut bearing trees often times share energies generally speaking. Pecan is a variant of Hickory and does have some of the more outgoing nature that Hickory overall possess. Pecan will be useful for any work or ritual concerning abundance, like Cherry, Apple, Pear, and Walnut at times. Pecan will have a slightly stronger protective nature about it, in comparison to the above mentioned. Not the most intuitive wood. However, it will be useful in binding rituals, including binding well with its owner/holder.

Poplar

North America

Masculine- Water, Spirit

A very flowing, fluid and diverse energy. Useful for a wide variety of uses. It also brings out the softer masculine qualities as well.

Purpleheart

Central and South America

Feminine- Spirit, Air

Very good for dream work, especially if directed towards any nightmare or restless sleep. Good for divination, those with higher psychic abilities and dissolving negative energy. The energy with Purpleheart works more on the subconscious level, providing that lean towards the dream realm. Sometimes the energy with Purpleheart can feel as though it is shifting, not like Padauk, but instead a feeling of deeper intermittent, intuitive or psychic connections

Rosewood

- East Indian- Feminine- Fire-- Fiery but grounded at the same time. Divination, communication with the afterlife and change are best suited works for this type of Rosewood.

-Bolivian- Feminine-Spirit, Fire-- More Motherly, but a greater sense of protection and intuition from this type of Rosewood. Scrying is useful for this wood.

-Brazilian-Masc/Fem- Spirit-- A deeper spiritual energy, divination, summoning, cleansing.

Red Palm

tropical regions, various locaitons worldwide

Masc/Fem- Water, Air

Conducts energies around it, like Satinwood. Highly intuitive.

Sapele

Africa

Masc/Fem-Earth, Fire

Very similar to Mahogany, however, its properties fluctuate more from grounded to fiery and back again. One must be mindful of their mood before working with Sapele.

Shedua

Western regions of Africa

Masc/Fem- Earth, Water

Shedua has a balance of Feminine and Masculine traits. Intuitive, flowing, protective and stabilizing, extroverted as well as introverted. Aligned mostly with the element of Earth, it does have a strong Water association as a secondary which further adds to a sense of Shedua being a “jack of all trades”. That is where Shedua’s relationship with other Wand woods ends.

Shedua is famous for its Occulumency and Legilimency work ( Legilimency is the art of exploring thoughts and the minds of others, although self exploration can also be a form. Occlumency would be the shielding effect when one can block negative intrusions or energies.) Shedua is a popular choice among health care workers, those that deal with individuals with traumatic energies, “energy vampires”, darkened environments, etc.

Can also be a good choice for scrying or charm work, making Shedua a nice go to for pendulums. Due to its nature, Shedua is a wood that frequent cleansing is recommended.

Snakewood

North, Eastern regions of South America

Masc/Fem- Earth, Water

Very physically healing. Snakewood also has a unique, deep energy signature that is sometimes hard to pinpoint.

Sycamore

Eastern USA

Masc/Fem- Spirit, Air

In tune with spiritual energies. Strong and hardy.

Teak

regions of Africa, Southern Asia

Feminine- Water

Many visualizations come to mind for a wood that is prized in wood working. In wandmaking, Teak hovers under the radar at times. A surprisingly strong willed, and magical wood. Both genuine, old growth teak as well as its plantation counterpart (most often used around here for growth/harvest management) offer an energy that often outperforms others. Teak is highly feminine in nature. Teak is highly protective, resistant to unwanted energies and excels at both spiritual and physical healing. Experienced Wandsmiths know it's true value, and also its ancient roots in many Asian cultures which attempt, rightfully so, to protect Teaks' sacredness.

Has a unique protective quality about it. Teak can be used for purifying. Flowing, but a GENERALLY calm signature to it. Teak is well liked for many types of work. It can have a dual personality at times though. Like a body of water, peaceful and calming or chaotic and forceful. Overall, a prized wood for Wandmaking- purifying, both spiritually and physically healing.

Tulipwood

Brazil

Feminine- Water, Spirit, Air

Tulipwood carried majority of the Rosewood traits. Loyal, resilient, protective, stabilizing and fiery.

Walnut

various locations worldwide

Masc/Fem- Earth, Water

Well balanced. Magical. Underrated companion. Walnut presents itself typically as a wood that looks great from face value, but some move to more flashy colours. We often do so without knowing what's inside. Walnut is what I like to call a Companion wood. It will go where you go and bond with you, very much like Bloodwood will. A wood that is an Omnivert... extroverted as well as introverted. It shares the best of both worlds from the Earth element profile and the Water properties- being one wood that is perfectly split between the two. Grounding, stabilizing, calming, protective, flowing, highly energetic. Reserved and abundant at the same time. A well-rounded wood for most any task, person and experience level. If you seek something more out of balance, but sharing the vast majority of Walnuts overall profile, then search for Nogal wood here.

Wenge

Central African regions

Masculine- Fire, Air

Excellent for mood stabilizing, calming one's mind. It promotes balanced thought. Works well for any meditation work for centering. Good for dispersing dark energies.

Willow

various locations worldwide

Feminine- Earth, Spirit, Water

Well known as an enchanting wood. Useful for charm work. Can work with most holders well. Lunar and Tide activity will affect Willow.

Yellowheart

Brazil

Masculine- Water

Influenced by surrounding energies, Yellowheart is highly associated with and works well with all lunar phases. Also sensitive to tide forces. It can emit a calming energy naturally on its own. However, Yellowhearts true personality is amplifying energies and taking on energies of nearly any variety around it. In some conversations, Yellowheart has been called the “Great Mimic”... like a chameleon. It has been known to be used in work ranging from calming to helping to do its best with Blackwood work..

Yew

various locations worldwide

Masculine- Spirit

A wood highly associated with death and reincarnation. It can also align itself with darker magic. Works well for divination, scrying and cross realm communication like African Blackwood. It can also help protect, both the living and those in the afterlife.

Zebrawood

West, Central Africa

Feminine- Air

Highly feminine in nature and energies. Excellent for any lunar or cycle work. Works well for divination purposes. Promotes good fortune. At times, some specimens have a very nice soothing quality about them. Those would be suitable for beginners looking for an exotic wood.

Ziricote

Central America

Masculine- Fire, Air, Spirit

A deep, complex fiery and spiritual energy. Can be used for many types of work but excels in holding off dark energy and magic. Has been known though to be unpredictable. Caution to be used.

Metals

Base Metals

Aluminium

The magician's "invisibility metal". Reflects incoming energies and makes the perfect base for magic mirrors. Useful for magical protection if worn as jewellery.

Copper

Primarily a conductor and it is also a bridge in many ways. It's a good metal to use for a magic wand because of this. Copper can be used to draw away negative energy.

Tin

Amazing substance that is a reminder that metals are made of crystals and that they are only experienced by us as "metallic" and "hard" because the circumstances of our world hold it in that state. If you can clear your mind of the general ideas about tin, you will find it a very helpful, compliant and co-operative element for symbol making especially.

Iron

Is the heart of the Earth but also, the heart of the universe itself. It is both terrestrial and stellar; as above, so below. Therefore, you can use iron as a grounding tool for earthbound work and at the same time, as a universal tool for other work. Iron is the metal of choice for out of body experiences and shamanic travel as it opens up the connections between this world, and the others.

Lead

The silent metal. It is a law upon itself and in magic, creates a space of silence. This is the perfect metal for "black space" meditations. Because of its ability to be silent in and of itself, it makes a good barrier to all forms of energy, and can be used to keep things in, as well as out; however, that is not its main purpose in energy magic but indeed, it is about "the silence within".

Zinc

Metal of magical revelation. It appears innocent and ordinary in its physical state, but on the other levels zinc is an extraordinary event with powerful transformational properties. One of the most fascinating metals to work with in energy magic.

Nickel

Extraordinary metal which extends into most dimensions, and has many levels of existence. It is extremely complex and when added to an alloy, increases the complexity of the mix by its very presence. It is therefore useful when additional information or energy is required, or when dealing with trying to solve problems, advance knowledge or a personal breakthrough or threshold shift is required.

Precious Metals

Gold

The sun metal. It has therefore been linked over the millennia with everything to do with health, wealth, and growth. On another level, it is about slow flow towards accomplishment. When working with gold, bear in mind that most things sold as gold these days are alloys. 24k gold is pure gold only.

Silver

A high level conductor, an open river that carries all things both ways. Silver absorbs many things but it doesn't store them which makes it into a very good metal for magical charms that need to flow and work on a continuous basis and without needing to be cleaned in between. Silver is also magically neutral.

Platinum

Has been called the "solid wisdom metal". It has a time attribute similar to lead which gives it extra dimensionality and a viewpoint of the wisdom of hindsight (or foresight). Platinum is an excellent metal for soul meditations and to help find and keep on a true road in this lifetime.

Ruthenium

An interesting metal which in and of itself isn't that strong, but lends strength when added to gold or platinum. For energy magic, Ruthenium can be a good choice when we need a catalyst to lift existing strengths and qualities to the next level.

Rhodium

The metal of achievement beyond earthly wealth, power and respect. Meditations and potions invoking rhodium have the power to move the world in a very different way.

Palladium

The metal of guardianship on the highest levels. Not a protector or a teacher, but a stable champion and a friend to keep grounded even when travelling very far from home.

Osmium

The metal of endurance beyond reason and strength beyond expectation. Adding the essence of osmium to a potion will evoke the vast reserves of strength which lie within each of us, but which we rarely reach or tap.

Iridium

The crucible metal and it is all about staying true to oneself in changing circumstances or even in hell itself. Iridium is helpful when absolute resolve is required; and through this resolve remaining steady, the environment becomes changed instead. A great seed component of energy magic potions that require a miracle to bring about the desired outcome.

Plutonium

Alive, active and extremely complex. If the energy magician can get away from previous entrainments about this metal, the ability of plutonium to interact with the environment and cause it to change is an extremely powerful change catalyst and change bringer indeed.

Uranium

The shape shifter metal. With its many aspects, it can become whatever the observer is most interested in and it has aspects of all major metals combined within it. It can be used to awaken sleeping aspects of the self, and to discover more of the whole story in any context.

Transition Metals

Zirconium

The first of the transition metals, their very existence being a practical reminder that metals are crystalline in essence - and nothing more so than zirconium, which is manufactured to produce the beautiful artificial cubic zirconia diamonds. Light and strong, lustrous and exceptionally resistant to corrosion, zirconium dances between the planes and keeps its identity regardless of the states it inhabits. Magically, this makes it into a good companion for far journeys, and transmutation.

Titanium

A light, strong metal with low density which seems at home most in an oxygen free environment - space metal, in other words. Use for meditations, explorations and invocations of stellar entities, and interstellar communication.

Chromium

Primarily a catalyst that helps lift us up and out of ordinary places and into the extraordinary. Both radiant and reflective, it can be used as a portal for extradimensional travel.

Tungsten

A strong and powerful protector, highly resistant to heat and other forms of radiation. It has a core quality of strength in structure in difficult environments, including extraterrestrial environments.

Manganese

Interesting effects on its environment and belongs to the group of metals used in shape shifting. Because of its ability to both deflect and refract light and energy, it is a flexible shield maker and strengthener, an ally to the traveller.

Cobalt

Takes the refraction properties of manganese one step further and produces very specific, deeply hypnotic emanations that can both cloak and transform the traveller. Radiant, powerful and extremely psychically active.

Cadmium

On the other side to cobalt in relation to manganese and has a strong resonance to the physical, from where it refracts outward as it transmutes itself and stretches into other dimensions. It is good for a base, and a launch pad to far journeys, providing a grounding or beacon back home, as well as an ongoing "ladder" of unfoldment points to go further and further from home. Good for beginners.

Mercury

In essence a flow of crystals, a crystal river. Extremely active and impactful at the multi-level, mercury has many applications from change, via trans dimensional transportation of consciousness to being a perfect choice for a magic mirror.

Metalloids

Gallium

Challenges our idea of the established and asks us to let go of preconceptions, stretching our receptive abilities to discover the truth about reality, which is always multi-dimensional. Working with gallium increases intelligence, systemic thinking and reduces fear of the unknown.

Indium

Has properties which are of little use in the environments we are familiar with - but on far journeys, its existence becomes more strongly revealed, as do its purposes. Use Indium for meditations of the true unknown, the unfamiliar, and to expand consciousness. Indium can be used as a guide towards the Akashic records, and Indra's web.

Thallium

Another of the metalloids that seems to be not at home on planet Earth at all. In its physical form, it is extremely toxic; in its metaphysical forms it is an event like the Northern Lights that can stimulate a renewed or deepened sense of awe about the nature of the Universe. Shows us the limitations of considering everything from a physical point of view.

Bismuth

Best known for making pretty, multicoloured "hopper crystals" and is a wonderful, safe and generally non-toxic introduction to the nature of metals and crystals, which in the end, obey the same universal laws and are more than just relatives in existence. Like the other metalloids, there is a whole lot more to it than meets the eyes, and bismuth particularly combines a great many "wonderful" properties of the other metals, crystals and metalloids, such as multi-faceted refraction, flow, regularity of structure and metaphysical expansion. An excellent metal/crystal for beginners and children.

Germanium

The same physical structure as diamond, but presents as a metal-like appearance. Germanium is an excellent metalloid for stimulating finding the truth beyond the form and is therefore a particularly useful addition to truth potions, and to cut through mental confusions and prejudices.

Antimony

The example of the multi-level events that are the metalloids which has been used by humans for magic, metaphysical, practical and healing purposes for the longest time. It is relatively straightforward and like all the metalloids, stimulates thought, expansion, and banishes "construct thinking". Because Antimony has been associated with healing for so long, it has a powerfield making it useful now for healing quests and to find healing answers beyond the ordinary.

What is the Mudutu Effect?

The Mudutu Effect is a "concept" rather than an item or thing. "Mudutu" translates as knowledge and as we begin to ask questions, we often find answers. The end result.... We ask more questions. You see, as we find one door, we are always looking for another to explore.

Are you a religion or the like?

We are all representatives from various walks of life. We each define and celebrate our own individual path and bring a variety set of skills to better the overall exploration.

Is this one of those "clubs" I need to pay to join?

There is no "joining", however if you walk away and ask "What if?" then basically that is the Mudutu Effect. We do get together and work for a common goal but it is strictly volunteer and sorry, no membership fees or a fancy card. We are a group of individuals striving to find our own individual answers and realize that each of us hold a piece of the puzzle to someone else's questions.

What is the symbol that is on all the logos and titles?

It is a sigil design that represents manifesting thoughts. The triangle is the symbol for manifesting alone, but the scripted sigil in the centre is "...as we are grounded in the physical universe our actions and thoughts are part of multiple worlds, and through this they are manifested back into the physical... Walk all worlds and you can change your universe...".
